SPLIT REPORTS
ARE RIDICULED

MUSSOLINI TO MEET
DR. DOLLFUSS.

ACTION ANTICIPATED

Rome, To-day.

The reports that Italy is on the verge of breaking with Germany owing to the continuance of terrorism in Austria, which have arisen as the result of Signor Virginio Gaydas slashing article in the Fascist organ, "Giornale d'Italia," are ridiculed in political quarters.

It is pointed out that Signor Mussolini might conceivably do so to consult other Powers with a view to a joint representation to Berlin. It Duce is unlikely to act before he has seen Chancellor Dollfuss of Austria, at Riccione during the week-end, it was stated on Saturday. —Reuter.

Signor Gaydas, in a presumably inspired article, on Saturday declared that Germany was in the forefront as regards the responsibility for "bestial terrorist outrages conducted by German agitators," and voiced a stern demand that it cease.

The campaign, he declared, was rendering ever more difficult the Italian-German relations.

Free Repatriation Demanded.

SEQUEL TO NEW LAW

Istanbul, To-day.

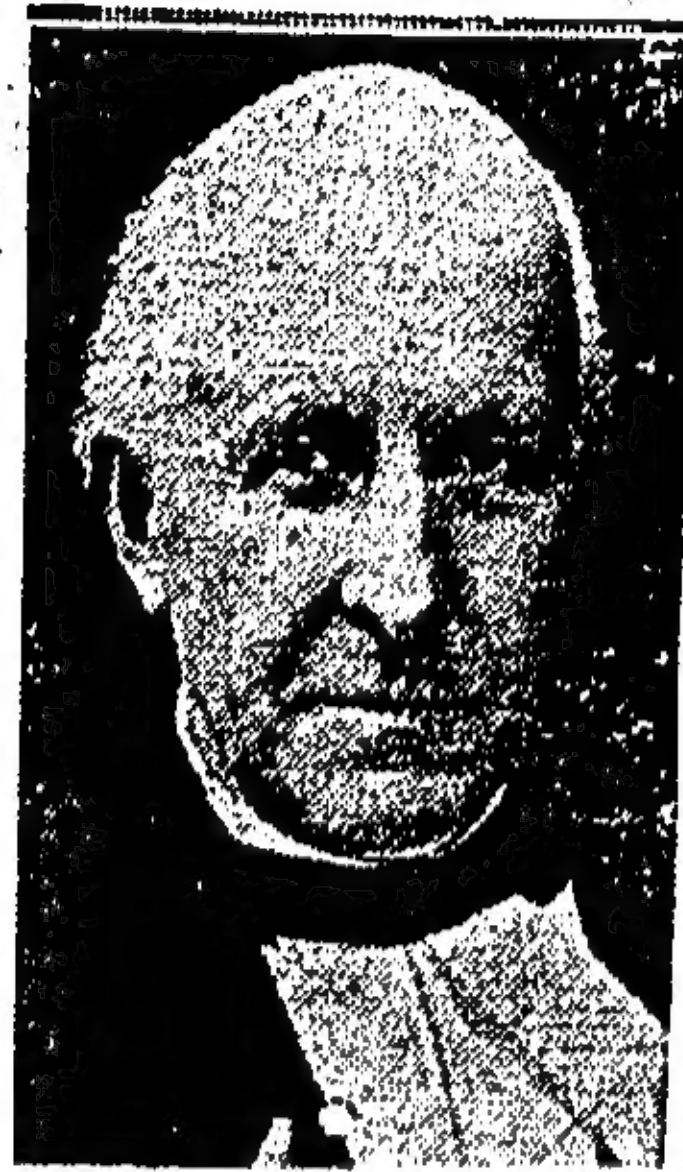

A number of Consulates in Turkey are besieged by foreigners demanding free repatriation following the application of the law forbidding foreigners to act as chauffeurs, guides, hairdressers, tailors, shoemakers, musicians and variety artists.

Under the law, the first group of 800 persons, with families totalling 5,000, were forced to abandon work yesterday morning. Three other groups, totalling 18,000 will be similarly affected shortly. —Reuter.

It is believed that the Government's telephone investigations will result in uniform and perhaps lower rates. —United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

The Most Reverend Conno Gordon Lang, Archbishop of Canterbury (above) has made a startling plea to His Holiness Pope Pius XI to help to avert war and to call upon all Christian churches of the world to promote a better spirit of christianity, stressing the present peril which is surrounding world peace.

113 IN SHADE AT ST. LOUIS.

New York, To-day.

The death toll in the heat-wave in the United States is now 235. There is no prospect of an immediate break in the weather.

The loss of crops in the middle-west and south-west States is estimated at hundreds of dollars, while the losses are expected to increase daily.

The thermometer at St. Louis on Saturday soared to 113 degrees, in the shade. —Reuter.

CANTON COOLER

Calendar Prediction
Goes Wrong.

[From Our Own Correspondent]

Canton, To-day.

Canton is much cooler to-day owing to continuous rainfall and a thunder storm yesterday. The temperature this morning before sunrise was 77 degrees.

The highest temperature last week was on Wednesday and Thursday when the mercury soared to 92 degrees Fahrenheit. In some places the mercury climbed as high as 96 degrees.

According to the Chinese calendar, to-day is the "Great Heat" or the hottest day. The native almanac is usually correct, but in Canton its prediction has gone wrong. Those who adhere to the lunar calendar say that after to-day the weather will be cool, although records show that August is really the hottest month of the year.

Temperature Down To 76 In Colony.

The maximum local temperature to-day was recorded at the Royal Observatory at 5 o'clock this morning, when the mercury stood at 81. It dropped considerably afterwards; at 7 a.m. it being 76, the minimum figure for the day.

Readings of 76 degrees were also taken at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. after which a slight increase was recorded, the reading at 3 p.m. being 77.1 degrees.

WARSAW, TO-DAY.

THE FLOODS OF THE PAST FEW DAYS HAVE BEEN TRULY CATASTROPHIC. BETWEEN 500 TO 600 PERSONS HAVING PERISHED. WHILE THE DAMAGE TOTALS £50,000,000. THERE IS AN ALARMING POSSIBILITY OF AN EPIDEMIC OF TYPHUS IN THE WHOLE OF SOUTH POLAND. MILLIONS OF SMALL FARMERS HAVE BEEN RUINED.

The Vistula River is still rising and thousands are lining the banks watching the floating wreckage of homes and wondering whether the levees will hold and save Warsaw itself.

Normally, the Vistula is a mere bare 200 yards wide, but, following torrential rains, has become a turgid mass half a mile across, hurling down to the sea. Small islands of sand and sheaves of wheat are being swept along in the raging waters.

A Reuter correspondent yesterday caught a glimpse of a dead child with an ashen face appearing wraith-like above the murky swell of the waters. —Reuter.

TYTAM RESERVOIR OVERFLOWS.

Kowloon Experiences
Minor Floods.

The almost continuous rainfall, which produced 4.48 inches for the 24 hours ended 10.30 a.m. yesterday, and 3.26 inches to 10.30 a.m. to-day, has caused no more landslides, according to Mr. H. Pegg, chief engineer of the Road Department, but Tytam Reservoir, the last one to overflow, was filled to capacity on Saturday. The minor slides which occurred on Saturday, in Shaokwan, near the Shek-O Road, and at Tai Hang, are now no longer a menace to traffic, effective work during the week-end having removed most of the debris. (Continued on Page 9)

LOCAL RAINFALL ABOVE AVERAGE

The local rainfall recorded at the Royal Observatory for the 24 hours ended 10.30 a.m. to-day, was 3.26 inches, bringing the total since January 1 to 51.28 inches, as compared with a normal average of 48.77 inches.

WEATHER FORECAST

Cloudy, with rain, probably improving, and moderate south winds, was the weather forecast issued by the Royal Observatory this morning.

CONCERTED ATTACK

[From Our Own Correspondent]

Canton, To-day.

Expecting the concerted drive of the Cantonese forces against the Communists in Western Fukien simultaneously with the Nanking detachments, General Chiang Kai-shek, Chairman of the National Military Commission, has remitted $600,000 Mex. to Canton as anti-Red expenses for this month.

This remittance is usually in arrears, but the anti-Red campaign against the Cantonese units in the drive against the Reds, who may start a counter-offensive if the push is not strong enough.

The First Group Army takes only $400,000 of the expenses, while $200,000 go to the Fourth Group Army, which has one division at the Kiangsi front.

New York, To-day.

Ten people were killed and 20 injured when a bus, filled with 40 New York trippers, overturned yesterday.

The bus, returning from a baseball match at Sing Sing Prison, toppled into a timber yard and caught fire. Most of the victims were incinerated, while some passengers, with their clothes ablaze, plunged into the nearby Hudson River.

The flames spread through the timber yard, which was completely gutted. The estimated loss is $150,000. —Reuter.

Dairen, To-day.

Mr. Yin Tung has arrived here from Shanghai and will meet Mr. Shibayama who is now hurrying here from Changchun, where he discussed the Tangku agreement.

It is learned that the Kwantung Army will not parley with Mr. Yin Tung. His mission is to seek the cancellation of the Tangku Agreement which the Japanese claim the Chinese are not carrying out. The Japanese will probably refer him to Manchukuo. —Reuter.

DILLINGER'S "LAST ROUND-UP"

FEDERAL AGENTS' COUP
IN CHICAGO
GRIM HUNT ENDED

CHICAGO, TO-DAY.

JOHN DILLINGER, AMERICA'S PUBLIC ENEMY NO. 1, ONE OF THE MOST RUTHLESS KILLERS EVER KNOWN, WAS SHOT DEAD OUTSIDE A NORTH SIDE THEATRE, YESTERDAY, ACCORDING TO THE UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE. —REUTER.

Dillinger's death brings to a close the most intensive man-hunt ever instituted in America. Hounded from State to State since his sensational prison break in March, Dillinger has left a trail of death in his wake, being credited with no less than 15 cold-blooded murders and many bank-hold-ups.

LILLIAN HOLLEY

DESPERADOE'S CAREER

The career of John Dillinger has been unprecedented, for sheer ruthlessness and desperation, even in the most brutal chapters of gang history.

Big rewards have been offered in the United States for his capture, and to such an extent has he filled the minds of the public that latterly almost any audacious raid or robbery has at once been presumed to be the work of Dillinger and his gang.

The police nearly got him on April 22, but he made a spectacular escape. Since then he has been credited with bank raids at Flint, Michigan, and Fostoria, Ohio, and was said to have got away with $6,000 and $3,000 respectively, while on June 30 he and his henchmen took $28,300 from the Merchants' National Bank, killing a policeman while making their get-away. He is also suspected of a ruthless shooting outrage at Chicago, on July 16.

NAME IN A YEAR

A year ago Dillinger was an unknown convict, serving a sentence for attempted robbery in Indiana State prison. In the 12 months since then his bloody and desperate deeds have made his name notorious as a "killer," gang-breaker, bank-robbler, and desperado of the worst description.

George (Sagor) (left) and Ernest Blunk, hostages taken by Dillinger (top) in his most recent dash for freedom, are shown after the desperado released them at Peotone, Ill.

PORTLAND STRIKE BROKEN

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL.
[By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegram, Radio Messages, Ordinances, 1892, Received July 23, 1.55 a.m.]

San Francisco, To-day.

Freight is moving normally on waterfronts in the Bay region, while longshoremen are preparing to vote whether to accept arbitration. The leading coast ship-pers have agreed to arbitrate all the differences of the maritime unions providing the longshoremen do likewise.

The Portland strike, apparently, has been broken and the waterfront is humming normally.

At Seattle, the police are fully in control of the waterfront — turbances. — United Press, per Company.

Guardsmen Prevent Disturbances.

Minneapolis, To-day.

All is quiet here. More than 400 National Guardsmen are assembled in the city. The Government has threatened martial law in the event of further disturbances. — United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

STOP PRESS

NO QUARTER GIVEN.

Chicago, To-day.

John Dillinger was killed after watching a film entitled "Manhattan Melodrama," portraying the deeds of gangsters of the underworld. Government agents were informed that Dillinger was in the theatre and lay in wait for 2½ hours. As he emerged, wearing a white shirt and grey trousers, accompanied by two women, they immediately opened fire. Dillinger fell, mortally wounded, one bullet having entered his head just below the eye, and another his heart.

One woman was slightly wounded, but both jumped into a taxi and escaped. When the news was flashed to Washington, the Attorney-General, Mr. Homer S. Cummings, smiled elatedly and described the desperado's end as "gratifying and reassuring." He warmly tributed the Chicago police. —Reuter.

Attractive New Beach Wear Can Be Smart

THE LINGERIE TOUCH

Nothing shows the improvement in ways of dressing more than the blouse, once the most untidy and ill-fitting of garments. The new trend of the blouse is very feminine, and so are summer afternoon dress corsages. The separate top, be it shirt, blouse, or—as the Americans term it—shirt-waist, is a pleasing way of ringing the changes. Further, it is easy to pack and to iron. The crisp lingerie lawns, with their pleats, frills and jabots, want very great care when it comes to holiday packing. The plain, rather tailored-type of shirt in silk or mixtures is the most practical to pack.

Satin Or Taffeta

The more dressy blouse can be of satin or taffeta, reaching to the waist or over. It can be cut with basque or in long tunic fashion, with sleeves short or long, plain or trimmed, whatever works in best with the scheme of dressing.

The lingerie-blouse is delightful, but all experienced good dressers who travel tell me the same tale. They pack a few of these dainty affairs in lawn and lace, but invariably wear the less elaborately laundered modes. They find that they can only appear in them once, and after that they have to be relegated among the soiled linen. Feeling that they should have something very fresh in reserve, many girls and older women have told me that they often return with the lingerie blouse unworn, and naturally none the better for having been lying in a drawer or case.

If one or two of the more fantastic linen blouses are insisted upon the neck-finish, collar, ties and jabot must be kept uncrushed separately in the hatbox, along with other fanciful bows and veils.

Neck Wear

Neck-wear has never been so scrupulously criticised as this season. Every sort of bow and cravat is introduced in the blouse or on to the collarless coat. A Paquin tunic-blouse, cut to the knees, demonstrated an interesting neck-finish in the shape of a wide butterfly-bow of what looked like a striped linen-rainbow effect in handwork. This was pulled out over a plain black swaggar-coat.

The longer tunic-blouse is the latest phase of this fashion, and when worn with plainly cut semi-tailored suits is smart and unusual. Still, it is not every woman who can wear a tunic.

BRASSO

This gorgeous creation of pale yellow chiffon adorns the beautiful Ellen Landi, screen star. A short tunic, long train and trailing streamers from the shoulders, give a charming floating effect, accentuated by the heavy collar of pale yellow crystals.

FASHION VOTE IN
RUSSIAWomen Asked To Vote
On Type Of Dress

Russian women were asked to vote for the kind of dresses they would like to wear at a fashion exhibition recently held at the Lensoviet, a large Moscow theatre. The exhibition, which was the first of its kind in the Soviet Union, had been arranged by the Moscow Clothing Trust with the object of testing public taste.

The dresses shown were definitely of Western style and were made of cotton, wool, silk, and artificial silk. Each exhibit carried a number, and visitors received voting papers, on which they were requested to mark the two dresses they liked best.

The show was immensely popular, and revealed the interesting fact that smartness is as dear to the Soviet women as it is to her Western sisters. Although there was little interest in frocks of the highest fashion, the winners of the election, a black wool street dress and a black silk tea gown, were reasonably elegant.

Government Decides

It is doubtful whether the Soviet Government will ever give way to public tastes to the extent of allowing such clothing to be imported from abroad, though inquiries have recently been made in Lancashire. The immediate plan is rather to improve the designs of home industry in the hope of being able to compete later on with British exports in Eastern markets. The first result of the Lensoviet exhibition is that the Moscow Clothing Trust has increased the number of its models from 76 to 107.

PLEATS IN SHORTS

New York.

Slacks and backless shirts, dresses that button down front or back, pyjamas with halter necklines, shorts in the new longer lengths—all these are what well-dressed young women will wear on bathing beaches this summer. Linen and novelty cottons are the outstanding fabrics for beach apparel and the vivid colours blue, red, yellow, orange, green, purple and the like—are getting first place with dark, solid ones such as brown and navy blue running second.

Debonair Slacks

Slacks have a debonair look about them that smart women simply love. Slimly tailored about the hips, flaring at ankles and cut for lounging-in-the-sun-comfort, they make a girl want to spend her entire vacation in beach clothes.

The outfit which is a perfect example of how charming one can look when not actually swimming. It is of bright blue uncrushable linen, it includes well-fitted slacks and a backless vestee top with a rolled collar. With it one wears toeless beach sandals and a brimmed bonnet of matching blue linen.

A Beach Ensemble

Another beach ensemble that appeals smartness plus comfort includes a natural-coloured terry cloth beach dress which buttons down the back and a cape of synthetic silk striped in navy, light blue and white trimming.

The sash that marks the normal waistline is of navy blue taffeta. If you have a penchant for shorts, blouses, shirts and skirts. The blouses are nice enough to wear with separate skirts when golfing or hiking and the skirts which button down the front can be removed easily.

Pleats In Shorts

The shorts, longer than formerly, are made with side pleats that allow for comfort when walking, playing tennis or lounging on the beach. If cotton doesn't strike your fancy, look at flannel ones with linen tops. These, of course, do not have matching skirts.

REMOVING INK
STAINSVinegar Effective In Aiding Removal

Ink stains on polished floors or on the woodwork of a desk may be removed by the application of vinegar to which a little methylated spirit has been added.

If an ink stain on a carpet, or on woollen material, can be treated before it has time to dry, methylated spirit, applied, will remove it.

For old stains which have dried and hardened, vinegar is effective. It should be applied gradually, and mopped into the surface with a soft rag until the stain is thoroughly saturated.

A pad of clean blotting-paper or old linen should then be pressed over, to absorb the moisture. To ensure a good result the process should be repeated several times.

Brown tweedish linen is used in this sports suit worn so charmingly by Evelyn Venable, film actress. The straight, tailored skirt has one inverted pleat directly in the front for fullness. The jacket is belted at the back and has two patch pockets. A stitched linen hat, in the rolled sailor style, and a brown and white plaid scarf are worn with the suit.

OIL-SILK CURTAINS
NOW IN STYLEGive Maximum Light
And Are Washable

BEST IN PALE COLOURS

To those who remember having the cut fingers of their childhood bound up with boracic lint and covered with a scrap of green oil-silk there is something delightfully incongruous in the spectacle of bathroom or kitchen curtains of this same material, especially when it is the same shade of grassy green.

But the fashion has come, and if the green stuff is too reminiscent of nursery surgery we have now any number of other colours to choose from.

There are, for example, reds and yellows of various depths, and the results are extraordinary satisfactory.

Oil-silk curtains have a double advantage. They are washable without removal from the window or glass door they furnish, and are of an opacity sufficient to exclude vision without shutting out light. The sun shines through them in a cheering fashion, yet the eyes of passers-by in the street cannot penetrate to the room they screen.

The fabric looks equally well hanging loosely from a top rod or stretched in folds between two rods at top and bottom. On the whole, it is usually best in pale colours, and in white it can be exquisite.

DYEING METHODS
FOR HOMEValuable Hints On The Correct Way

At this time of the year many articles of clothing and household furnishing can be improved by dyeing, but home dyeing is frequently unsuccessful unless a few important points are borne in mind.

A little salt added to a dye will help to brighten the colour considerably, and when it is borne in mind that a dyed article always dries lighter than it appears when wet it is wise to make the dye a little darker than is desired.

A yellow article is seldom dyed blue successfully, as the material

BRIDGE NOTES

A Double Grand Coup.

by Ely Culbertson.

The Grand Coup in Bridge, which involves the ruffing of high cards in one hand with superfluous trumps in the other, is in its essence simply a trump reducing play, the purpose of which is not to be forced, at the end, to ruff unnecessarily, thus placing the lead in the wrong hand and forcing the Declarer to lead up to a minor tenace in trumps in the hand of an opponent at the right.

Mr. T. D. Owen-Turner of Vancouver, B.C., recently sent me an interesting example of a hand played as a Double Grand Coup.

In other words, the Declarer was twice forced to reduce his trump holding so that he might hold the same number as his opponent on the right at the eleventh trick and at the same time have the lead in the Dummy so that the opponents' trumps might be captured.

The bidding:

South West North West

2 S Pass 3 D Pass

3 S Pass 4 C Pass

4 NT Pass 5 NT Pass

7 C Pass 7 S Pass

Pass Pass

In explanation of the bidding

Mr. Owen-Turner remarks that it appears as though the contract should be seven notrump, but

South, was afraid to chance a six-bid for fear of a pass by North and felt sure that if North's two suits were four-carders, he would bid seven spades or seven notrump, whereas if they were fivecarders, the seven notrump bid

from South might possibly shut out the right contract.

The Opening lead was a small club, which was won by South with the Knave. He thereupon laid down the spade King, and when the Queen was dropped from the West hand, it clearly indicated that East had held our trumps to the Ten originally and hence that the only way of making the Grand Slam contract was by means a coup.

In order to secure the necessary number of entries to complete the trump shortening, South was compelled to attempt an "unnecessary" finesse in his diamond suit. His lead to trick 3 was the Ten of diamonds and he must have prayed fervently not only for the success of the "unnecessary" finesse, but also that

West be not tempted to play the Queen.

As a matter of fact, West did not play the Queen, and the Knave was finessed. When this held, the prospect of success looked brighter. Of course, if West had played the Queen, the chance for the Grand Coup and the fulfillment of the contract would have vanished.

At this point the spade 9 was led, and East, of course, covered;

otherwise the nine would have been permitted to hold and then the success of the contract would only have involved the mere picking up of East's trumps. The Knave of spades won the trick, and the Dummy was re-entered by the lead of the diamond King, which was overtaken by the Ace.

A small diamond was now led from Dummy, and Declarer ruffed with the spade deuce. The club

King was then led, overtaken with the Ace, and the last diamond in Dummy led and ruffed with the spade 8. At this point the Declarer had completed the process of trump shortening. He now held the Ace-ax of spades over

East's seven-five.

A small heart was led from the Declarer's hand, which was won with the Queen in Dummy. The club Queen, followed, and East, realizing the futility of his attempt to further defend the hand, ruffed with the five.

Had he attempted instead to discard a heart, the Declarer would also have discarded. When the club was ruffed, the Declarer over-ruffed, then drew the last trump from East and won the remaining two tricks with the Ace-King of hearts.

Thomas Layden, 17, of Newark, is under a 3-year-sentence in a Federal prison, following the discovery of his plot to bomb the Somerville, N. J., estate of Doris Duke, so-called "richest girl in the world." He sent the actress a note demanding $3,000 or else. The two are shown.

HIGHEST MISSION OF NAZI WOMEN

But woman's highest mission always will be motherhood. The will to motherhood is a "woman problem." However, it becomes a national problem in the face of statistics which show an appalling decline in the birth rate, a falling off of one million births a year. In many large German cities the number of living children born is already lower than the death rate. The population figure shows a steady decrease except in cases of influx from the country districts. The importance of these facts cannot be overrated.

Looking back over past decades, we realize that the negation of the child is not merely a manifestation of present economic difficulties. It is a gradually growing thought, sprung possibly first from selfishness, from love of ease and luxury in the upper social collapse. In spite of this, however, it is still the woman of that stratum which is always on the edge of poverty, who finds in her children, no matter how many, the natural complement of her being, her one joy in a life poor in pleasures.

Re-Awakening Motherhood
No laws can re-awaken this will to motherhood in a nation, and especially not in the woman herself. Not even State aid nor premiums, as France's example shows.

To re-awaken the will to the child in the soul of the woman means: To restore her joy in her child by as far as possible freeing her from economic and spiritual oppression.

To awaken in her the sense of responsibility toward her nation, out of which grows her duty toward her child, her readiness to accept it.

To reawaken in her a consciousness of the purest import of womanhood of the child.

Realisation of these aims demands:

Economic aid: i.e. work for the husband and father; economic protection for mother and child during marriage and in case of dissolution of the marriage with no guilt on her part.

Health protection for mother and child by medical guidance of both partners to marriage; before consummation of the union; providing of hygienic necessities for mother and child.

Primal necessity in the education of a new generation of young girls for motherhood; for the will to motherhood, is the influence of another woman. The young girl is to be brought up as a girl, not as an imitation man. Which, however, does not in any way deny her right to outdoor recreation; to sports; to every sort of bodily development in freedom. It is indeed, a leading purpose of National Socialist education for the growing girl, that she shall be made strong and healthy in mind, body, and soul, better to fulfil her future task of motherhood. She shall learn the joy of life, but she shall learn, also, its duties, its demanded sacrifices.

club Queen, followed, and East, realizing the futility of his attempt to further defend the hand, ruffed with the five.

Had he attempted instead to discard a heart, the Declarer would also have discarded. When the club was ruffed, the Declarer over-ruffed, then drew the last trump from East and won the remaining two tricks with the Ace-King of hearts.

Cinema Notes

"SPITFIRE"—KING'S THEATRE

Starred in one of her most unique and difficult roles, Katharine Hepburn, star of "Little Women," comes to the King's Theatre in R.K.O.-Radio's melodrama of the Carolina Mountains, "Spitfire." "Spitfire," adapted from the Broadway stage success, "Trigger," is the story of a beautiful mountain witch, whose naive temperament and personality combine with her queer wickedness, tirades and prayers, and hate and love, to give Miss Hepburn a powerful characterisation.

Supporting her in the cast are Ralph Bellamy, Robert Young, Louis Mason, and Sarah Haden.

"CENTRAL AIRPORT"—QUEEN'S THEATRE

Action, thrills, and daring flights, combined with romance, make First National's current release, "Central Airport," the one of the finest air films seen in the Colony.

The story of the film is that of two brothers who share all dangers of the air, but who find that they cannot share the dangers of the embraces of a woman whom they both love.

A stellar array of stars, including Richard Barthelmess, the star of more than 50 dramatic films, Sally Eilers and Tom Brown, are in the cast.

"AS HUSBANDS GO"—ALHAMBRA THEATRE

Rachel Crothers, author of "When Ladies Meet" and "Let Us Be Gay," is responsible for "As Husbands Go," Fox's current production now showing at the Alhambra Theatre.

Warner Baxter, who was last seen here in "Paddy, the Next Best Thing," is starred in the leading role, with Helen Vinson playing opposite.

Wonderful characterisations are enacted in the story of the young wife who falls in love with an Englishman while on tour in Paris. She returns to America, but is followed by her English lover, who is welcomed by the husband.

Supporting Baxter and Miss Vinson in the cast are Warner Oland, Catharine Doucet, G. F. Huntly, Frank O'Connor, Eleanor Lynn and Jay Ward.

"TIGER SHARK"—STAR THEATRE

Thrilling battles with man-eating sharks and a stirring drama of the sea are provided in the First National picture, "Tiger Shark."

Edward G. Robinson, the great character actor of "Five Star Final," gives a clever characterisation of an ill-tempered Portuguese skipper who has been mangled by a shark while saving the life of his best friend, Richard Arlen. He becomes enraged, however, when he finds that his friend has come between him and his wife (Zita Johann) and in a fight throws Arlen overboard to the sharks.

FINCHER BROS. LEAD PREMIER TENNIS LEAGUE PARTNERSHIPS

THE GLORIOUS UNCERTAINTY OF CRICKET

AUSTRALIA ARE IN POSITION TO FORCE WIN

VETERAN PONSFORD SCORES THIRD TEST CENTURY

Australia will resume their innings to-day at Leeds with the knowledge that, with six wickets in hand, two days yet to play, and a lead of 294 over England, there is every possibility of forcing a second win in the Test series to take a 2-1 lead before the final Test opens at the Oval on August 18.

In the present series both countries have won one match in the three played, and in the whole series, dating back to 1876, each country has had 52 triumphs.

Saturday's recovery, which brought about by the world record third wicket partnership of 388 (scored in 335 minutes) by W. H. Ponsford and Don Bradman, was yet another example of the glorious uncertainty of cricket. During the last ten minutes on Friday, Australia lost three valuable wickets for 2 runs and commenced play on the following day with 39 for 3 and prospects of defeat staring them in the face. At the close of play they were in a commanding position with every prospect of forcing a win.

Ponsford's Fourth Century

Scoring 110 in his debut Test at Sydney in the 1924-5 season, 34-year-old Ponsford had, up to Saturday, scored three centuries against England. His previous highest score in a Test was 128, at Melbourne in the same series. The highest score of his career was 437 (second only to Bradman's 452 against Queensland), scored against Queensland in 1927-8. He also scored 429 against Tasmania at Melbourne in 1922-3. He has had two other scores above three hundred—352 not out against New South Wales, and 336 against South Australia.

Bradman, 26-year-old wizard of the cricket field, after scoring only 133 in five innings in the present series, leapt to the head of the Test averages as the result of his brilliant display at Leeds, the ground on which he set the world Test record of 334 four years ago.

Having now scored eight centuries in Tests, including one over three hundred and three double centuries, Bradman has, to date, scored 2,242 in Tests against England for an average of 86.23.

COLE AND READ WILL ATTACK CYCLING MARKS

Local Club-Cracks In Training.

WEEK'S ACTIVITIES

Sunday's run of the Hong Kong Cycling Club, which was scheduled to commence from the Vehicular Ferry, Kowloon, at 9.15 a.m., was postponed until 2 p.m. when several of the hardened members carried out a direct out and home trip to Castle Peak.

Mr. H. A. G. Keates, who had arranged to lead the run, disappointingly failed to put in an appearance and Mr. T. Wallis officiated in his absence.

In spite of the delayed start, the party soon found themselves soaked to the skin, but this did not deter them, and quite a jolly band set out on the return trip at 4 p.m. arriving in Kowloon, after a fast pace had been set, at 5.10 p.m.

Next Sunday's Run

Next Sunday it is intended to make the objective of the run Sheung Wo Hang and Sha Tau Kok, in which area several paths, etc. are to be explored. Mr. L. A. Anning will be in charge on this occasion, and a fine time should be had under the old Plymouth C. C. rider.

For the benefit of those interested cyclists who are not yet in possession of machines of their own, an arrangement has been made with Yuk Wah, No. 111 Hennessy Road, Wanchai, for cycles to be hired out, to participants in the above run, for 80 cents (no time limit).

Record Attempts

Definite intimation of attempts to establish road records in Hong Kong have now been received. Mr. J. Cole is to ride for the 5 and 10 miles records.

Mr. C. Read, will attempt the 25 miles.

Both have now settled down to strict training, and a trial is to be made during this week on the peninsula.

CHANNEL SWIMMING SEASON

Windermere And Bristol Channel To Be Tried

LONDON SWIMMER'S PROGRAMME

London, July 14.

The annual attempt by swimmers to conquer the English Channel will soon be in full swing again.

E. H. Temme, the famous London swimmer and water-polo player, is in intensive training for one of the most ambitious programmes ever attempted.

He hopes to swim the Channel from England to France, to swim the Bristol Channel from Colknap to Somerset, a distance of 21 miles in strong currents, and to swim the length of Lake Windermere.

Neither of the latter feats yet has been accomplished. Lake Windermere is only a miles swim, but it has remained unconquered owing to the intense coldness of the water.

The last time the Channel was conquered was in 1930 by a South African, Miss Peggy Duncan.

The following are those who have succeeded in performing this feat:

AMERICANS ARE FAVOURED TO WIN DOUBLES

Should Decrease Arrears In Davis Cup.

AUSTRALIAN PAIR LIKELY TO OFFER STERN CHALLENGE

America is expected to reduce the 2-0 arrears in the Inter-Zone Final Davis Cup match against Australia when George Lott and Lester Stoeffer meet Jack Crawford and Adrian Quist in the doubles match on the No. 1 court at Wimbledon to-day.

The American pair dethroned Borotra and Brugnon at Wimbledon this year after the Frenchmen had won the title for two successive years, but the Australians also beat the French aces in the semi-final of the European Zone.

A win to-day for Australia will assure them of entry to the Challenge Round, in which they will meet the holders, Great Britain, at Wimbledon next Saturday, Monday and Tuesday.

Last year Australia beat Japan to meet Britain in the European Inter-Zone Final, but were beaten 3-2. Britain then beat America and succeeded against France, the holders, by 3 to 2 to win the trophy.

POLAND ARE ALMOST ASSURED OF WIN.

Tloczynski Secures Commanding Lead.

Warsaw, To-day.

Poland is still leading Belgium by 2 matches to 1 in the 1935 Davis Cup qualifying round, the rain, which is responsible for the serious flood havoc, causing the suspension of the singles matches yesterday.

Tloczynski, who had his match against Lacroix abandoned on Saturday owing to bad light, was leading Nuyet 6-4, 10-8, 7-6 when play was stopped yesterday. The match, which will probably seal Belgium's doom, will be continued from that score to-day.

Scores, as cabled by Reuters, were:

Tloczynski (Poland) led Nuyet 6-4, 10-8, 7-6.

EARLIER RESULTS

Hebda (Poland) beat Nuyet 8-6, 6-3, 6-2.

Tloczynski (Poland) beat Lacroix 6-3, 6-3, 12-10.

Borman and Lacroix (Belgium) beat Hebda and Tloczynski 6-2, 6-4, 4-6, 6-2.

The qualifying rounds for the Davis Cup, under the revised laws governing the 34-year-old competition, are now played off in the year preceding the actual competition.

GERMAN GRAND PRIX WON BY STUCK

New Lap Record Set

Cologne, July 15.

Germany's daredevil driver, Hans Stuck, swept over the finishing line of the 570 kilometre track of the famed Nuerburg Ring at Adenau to-day in a new record time, averaging 123 kilometres per hour to win the annual Grand Prix of Germany.

Closely behind the Auto Union driver, the Italian racer, Fagioli, was second in a Mercedes-Benz car. The French dash, Chiron, never threatened and came third in an Alfa Romeo machine.

The winner also set a new record for a single lap of the Nuerburg ring when completing the ninth round at 127.5 kilometres per hour. Trans-Ocean Kuo Min.

CHINESE PAIRS STRIVE FOR LEAD IN "B"

HOWARD AND HAMSON'S FINE PLAY IN "C"

COMPLETE RECORD TO DATE

TEDDY Fincher and Ernie Fincher, former contenders for the Colony Open Doubles title, are leading the "A" Division Lawn Tennis partnership list with 16 wins and a draw in 18 games. In spite of the good form of the K.C.C. No. 1 pair the Kowloon Cricket Club are unlikely to do better than finish third to the Chinese Recreation Club and South China.

Two Chinese pairs are striving for the honours in the "B" Division, though M. K. Lau and P. F. Choy are the only major pairing with an unbeaten record in this division.

With 22 wins out of 33 encounters J. J. Ferguson and F. Angus (C.B.A.) lead the "C" Division, but W. J. Howard and A. B. Hamson (C.C.C.) have a more impressive record with 19 wins and a draw in 21 matches.

The following is a complete record of every partnership experimented with in the four divisions of the Lawn Tennis League to date this season:

BABE RUTH'S RETURN TO BASEBALL

Injured Player Hits Home Run.

"DOUBLE" FOR CARDINALS AND YANKEES

New York, To-day.

Babe Ruth, of the New York Yankees, who had to be carried off the field on Wednesday when struck by a ball hit by Lou Gehrig in the major league American match against Cleveland Indians, made an auspicious return to the game yesterday to hit a circuit clout against Chicago White Sox, enabling the Yankees to win by a 8 to 2 tally.

The Babe had insisted, against the doctor orders, that he would be fit to play on Sunday.

Cincinnati Reds, one of the weakest teams in the major league, put up a fine struggle against the New York Giants, world champions, extending the game to

AUSTRALIA LEAD AMERICA IN DAVIS CUP

Crawford And McGrath Win In Singles.

GREAT DAY FOR COMMONWEALTH

London, Saturday.

To-day was a great day for Australia. In the Davis Cup, Jack Crawford and Vivian McGrath won their singles matches to give the Commonwealth a 2-0 lead in the Inter-Zone Final against America on the No. 1 court at Wimbledon, and in the Test match W. H. Ponsford and Don Bradman broke a record to place Australia in a commanding position against England.

Results of the Davis Cup match were—
J. H. Crawford (Australia) beat F. X. Shields 6-1, 6-2, 12-10.
V. M. McGrath (Australia) beat S. B. Wood 7-5, 6-4, 1-6, 9-7.
Crawford treated the crowded gallery to a superb exhibition, showing the form that made him No. 1 world ranking player last year.

His service was magnificent, aceing the versatile Shields on several occasions. He kept an immaculate length on his backhand and had his opponent rushing backwards and forwards on the baseline, scoring with a fluent stream of glorious drives.
Shields' service served him best, but he was poor in his volleying, netting many easy returns.
Concentrating on the sidelines and forcing Shields to play a defensive game on the baseline, Crawford quickly won the first set for the loss of only one game.

AMERICAN ERRATIC
Shields was most erratic in the second set. He frequently smashed easy shots into the net, and succeeded in only securing two games.

Shields, who had been sacrificing accuracy for speed, improved in the third set in which he actually led 6-5 and 7-6, but he was unable to break down Crawford's very strong defence, and was beaten for set and match at 12-10.

UNORTHODOX PLAY
Wood was beaten by McGrath's famous two-handed back-hand shots, which frequently shattered his best plans.
Towards the end, Wood appeared to be careless and netted a number of easy fore-hand shots.

McGrath was steady, and although he hit hard with his backhand, never lost control of his forehand drives and never played hurriedly.
He eased the pace of his backhand in the third set, which he dropped after winning only one game, but returned to fight in the fourth with all his former spirit, winning after 16 games.—Reuter.

LANDSLIDE DAMAGE REPAIRED

Rain Deters Visitors To Cheung Chau.

ISLAND ACTIVITIES

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Cheung Chau, To-day. Services have been started for the season here, and Sunday School classes have commenced. The first service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Hassel, while the following Sunday the Rev. M. Rankin took charge and yesterday the Rev. Rex Ray preached.

All visitors to the island who have, in the past, contributed to the Evangelisation Society are invited to attend a meeting of the Church of Christ in China, to be held in the Hop Yat Church Hall, commencing with tea at 5 p.m. on Wednesday.

The Rev. Mr. Kempf, having arrived here from Tak Hing his Bible Study Class will commence, with a meeting, this Sunday.

DIAMOND JUBILEE

There have been several birthday celebrations on the island. A happy function took place at the home of the Rev. R. Ray when an old inhabitant reached his diamond jubilee.

Repairs to No. 2 A, where the landslide took place recently, have now been completed. Progress has also been made on the verandah of No. 6.

The Annual Meeting of the C.C.R.A. is to be held on August 6. Heavy rainfall on Saturday and Sunday deterred many week-end visitors.

LOSS TO ISLAND

The Cheung Chau Residents' Association, and visitors to the island, will greatly miss Mrs. Franklin, who, with her husband, took such a prominent part in the affairs of the Association.

Mrs. Franklin and her engaged daughter sailed for England on the s.s. Gange last week. It is hoped that Mrs. Franklin will return to Cheung Chau.

Mrs. Losser is making good progress towards recovery from her accident.

SOLICITOR WITHDRAWS FROM CASE

Mr. Lim, in making his application for the case to be heard separately, said that he was unable to state his reasons in open Court. He asked his Lordship to accept his personal assurance that it would be in the interests of justice if the order was made.

Authorities Quoted

Mr. Lim then quoted authorities on the point in favour of his submission and added that he did not think the prosecution would be embarrassed if the order was made.

Mr. J. A. Fraser, the Assistant Attorney-General, who conducted the case for the Crown, replied that he could not agree with his learned friend. He was, if anything, against the order being made. The scene of the crime was in one of the remotest spots in the New Territories and it was extremely difficult to present his case as there was no plan of the area and he had to resort to photographs.

Mr. Fraser added that he also had difficulty in obtaining his witnesses for the case.

The evidence against the two accused, if not exactly the same, at all events led into each other so that the case might easily be covered by one trial.

Application Refused

His Lordship observed that it was a very difficult matter, but that there was one rule which left the decision with the Prosecuting Counsel, and, as Mr. Fraser had already intimated that he thought the case could be heard jointly, the application was refused.

Mr. Lim asked for the accused to be separately represented and to be allowed to withdraw. He was sorry if he had not given notice of this decision earlier, but if the application had been granted he could have carried on with the case.

An adjournment was granted for consultation in chambers after which his Lordship said that he had considered the point which Mr. Lim had brought before the Court and the details which he was reluctant to give in open Court. The position which Mr. Lim now found himself was one, he thought, which all concerned would agree was one which no man could be called upon to continue under. He, therefore, granted an adjournment in the case until July 30 to allow fresh assignments on behalf of the accused to be made.

The striking resemblance of the girl posing with the sailor in the above photo to Grace Budd (inset), who was 10 when kidnapped six years ago, caused the parents of the missing girl to ask the New York police to try to learn the identity of the young woman. Picture was published in a New York newspaper in connection with visit of United States fleet.

INDIAN GUARD SENTENCED

THREE YEARS HARD FOR SHOOTING.

SCENE IN SUPREME COURT

Sawaran Singh, the Indian anti-piracy guard of the steamer Fatsan, created a scene this morning at the Criminal Sessions, Supreme Court, as he was led after sentence of three years' hard labour had been passed by the Chief Justice, Mr. A. D. MacGregor, on charges of wounding a fellow guard, Thakur Singh, on board the steamer Fatsan during the voyage from Canton to Hong Kong on April 12.

The prisoner raised his voice and pointed at the complainant, who was sitting at the side of the dock, in a threatening manner.

His Lordship, in passing sentence, said that the case had given him a great deal of anxious thought. The accused was a young man with an excellent police record, but he could not lose sight of the fact that the jury had found accused guilty of a very serious offence. It was an offence for which the law provided a sentence of life imprisonment.

"I cannot, after the jury's patient hearing of your trial, pass a sentence which is not in proportion to the gravity of the offence which you have committed. One consolation which I have is that the term of imprisonment will at least keep you away from opium. With regard to all circumstances the least sentence which I can pass is one of three years' hard labour."

Gurgin Singh, the father of the prisoner, pleaded mercy for his son. The latter, he said, had come here at the age of 15 and was his only son. He was aware, however, that his son took a great deal of opium.

The case arose out of the shooting affair on board the steamer Fatsan on April 12, when, it was alleged, following jealousy over the appointment of another guard to the post as sergeant of the guards, the prisoner shot the complainant in the chest with his revolver. He did not make any attempt to escape, but submitted after being arrested by the ships' officers.

On Friday, the jury, composed of Messrs. C. S. Rosset (Foreman), J. D. Kinnaird, A. E. Ab-long, Andrew Cheung Yau-ken, S. E. Green, Choa Po-yew and J. F. Richmond, found the prisoner guilty, and his Lordship reserved sentence.

'BROTHERLY LOVE' IN STREET BRAWL

Two Indians Fined $10.

Two Indian watchmen, Abdulla Zabar, 30 years old, and Din Mohamed, 22 years old, both residing in Canton Road, were charged before Mr. E. I. Wynne Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning for fighting near No. 3 Wharf of Kowloon Godowns at 10 a.m. on July 21.

Detective-Sergeant Cashman said that both had cuts on their heads, as though sticks had been used. Both defendant's however, said that they were only having some fun.

Mr. Wynne Jones: "Were they drunk?"

Sgt. Cashman: "No."

Mr. Wynne Jones: "Were you fighting with your fists?"

Defendants: "We fought with our fists, then we fell down and knocked our heads on the ground."

Mr. Wynne Jones: "Look here! You are watchmen, aren't you? Isn't it your duty to keep order, not to create a disturbance?"

Defendants: "Yes. We are brothers and have no complaint to make against each other."

Sgt. Cashman: "They didn't seem too friendly when they came to the station."

Both were fined $10.

LITERARY NOTES

IN THE WILDS OF MONGOLIA

Ambitious Expedition Recalled

TEEMS WITH INCIDENT

Tents in Mongolia. By Henning Haslund. (Kegan Paul, 7s. 6d.) The author of this book with five companions set out in 1923 to found a farming settlement in Bulgun Tal, in Mongolia. It was an ambitious undertaking, and these few pioneers were chosen from hundreds of applicants, not only for their capacities and achievements but for their personal qualities.

From the moment the expedition started to the day they returned to Denmark, the story is one of enterprise and adventure. The book teems with incident. Henning Haslund has a most attractive modesty, which is responsible for one of the great charms of his writing.

He never gives the impression that he has done anything noteworthy, and in telling of hardships and dangers his emphasis is always on the intensified pleasure that follows—of warmth after exposure, food after starvation, freedom after captivity, and so on.

He is keenly susceptible to impressions of every kind, and we often stumble upon vivid little word-paintings that are delightfully unexpected in a book of this kind—one can instance the description of an ancient Russian ikon and a picturesque tale of the meeting in the desert with a robber-prince. There is also an amusing anecdote about some lamas who came to exercise the evil spirits of the camp, but whose food rations had to be reduced, before they could be persuaded that their mission was accomplished.

LIFE OF LADY HESTER.

Famous Figure Of 18th Century.

Much has been written about Lady Hester Stanhope, who made herself both famous and notorious in the eighteenth century.

Now all is known about her that is likely to be known, and it will be reflected in a work by Miss Joan Haslip, which Cobden-Sanderson will issue soon.

It includes a picture of the London of Lady Hester's earlier life and of the circle in which she moved as William Pitt's niece.

NEITHER SATIRE NOR FARCE.

An Amusing But Unlikely Story.

"Pantelicon," by Eve Scarborough (Frederick Muller, 7s. 6d.), is a story of how Mr. Hopeon Harcourt, the proprietor of a furniture shop, inveigles an ex-king to act as shop-walker in his antique department, and falls in love with Princess Ellane, the king's daughter. Eventually the king is restored to his throne, and the princess marries Mr. Harcourt's secretary.

It is an amusing story, told with unflagging sprightliness. Mr. Scarborough has not quite made up her mind whether she is writing a satire or a farce. For a satire her characters are too farcical; for a farce her approach is too satirical. But it is a clever book, and Princess Ellane is almost (but not quite) as convincing as Zuleika Dobson.

ENGLAND'S RULE IN INDIA.

Macmillan's Historical Record.

The Macmillans promise a history of England in India by Mr. Edward Thompson and Mr. G. T. Garratt, which musters an unusual range and variety of experience. They have written the book mainly from primary sources, with a full use of contemporary material, and called it "The Rise and Fulfillment of British Rule in India."

Over-Population Refuted

Woman Medico On Social Life.

PROVOCATIVE OPINIONS

Dr. Enid Charles in "The Twilight of Parenthood" (Watts, 7s. 6d.) attacks Malthusianism with authoritative and, at moments impassioned, logic. Malthus, she contends, "enthroned sterility as one of the cardinal virtues," had little conception of what "a planned ecology" could be, and, in comparison to Kuczynski, was a most deplorable demographer.

Our present society, she contends, "has built up a pattern of social behaviour on the assumption that too many people are being born." This, she suggests, is an incorrect assumption. It ignores the development of the scientific technique of food production, it is based upon ignorant and misleading statistics, and it disregards recent research into the physiology of reproduction in mammals.

Dr. Charles has many sharp things to say about Malthus, Ricardo, M. de Jouvenel and Professor Maynard Keynes; she has many interesting things to say about such varied subjects as sex-life among baboons, the wood wasps of New Zealand, and why the book.

BIRDS, ANIMALS AND INSECTS.

Countess Warwick's Nature Book.

Nature's Quest. By Frances Countess of Warwick. (John Murray, 7s. 6d.)

Frances Countess of Warwick confesses to "an ever-growing impatience with those who destroy life for mere amusement," and her little book is intended to awaken the reader's conscience and understanding in regard to the manifold fascinations of the world of Nature.

A vast amount of detail and anecdote concerning birds, animals and insects is presented. She reveals many little-known facts concerning colour-blindness in animals, the eyes of fish, the "intelligence" of plants and the nature of instinct.

Scandinavians instal central heating in pigsties.

She is very much in earnest and very scrupulous and precise. Her opinions are serious, commendable, a trifle optimistic, and provocative. No confirmed disciple of Malthus can possibly afford to miss this book.

GOLD WON FROM THE SEA.

Simple Mystery Tale

That Grips.

The Flying Argosy. By Arthur J. Rees. (Jarrolds, 7s. 6d.)

A story of gold won from the bottom of the sea; of the theft of the treasure, and of the adventures which follow. Mr. Rees shows a commendable ingenuity in construction, but whether his originality in nomenclature is advisable seems doubtful.

The hero, "an English seaman to the backbone," is named Vanderdoss, and other characters are called Robecq, Teechaza, Wreatham, and Jervane. Names as unfamiliar as these tend to interrupt the even assimilation of the story.

Still, the tale is simply told; and mystery and movement hold the attention throughout.

WALKS AND TALKS IN HEREFORD

Sir Arnold Wilson, M.P., set out to know his Hertfordshire constituency by walking about it. An outcome of this is a book by him which the Oxford University Press will publish as "Walks and Talks." It may be called a rough sketch for a modern version in miniature of Cobbett's "Rural Rides."

A Dying Language.

Ireland has won her freedom, but she has lost her ancient tongue. The Minister for Education has just confessed in the Dail that the Irish language is dying out in the Irish-speaking districts, in spite of the efforts of schools elsewhere to promote its use. He even put forward a scheme of granting small Government bonuses each year to Irish-speaking parents to induce them to speak Gaelic to their children. When it is remembered that the Constitution of the Irish Free State lays down that "Gaelic is the national language" of the State, the bonus scheme is seen to be an irony which is indeed characteristically Irish, at once both comic and tragic. The "national language" is now only spoken as a living tongue in the Gaeltacht, those small, jagged patches of the western coast where Gaelic still survives among the fishermen and peasantry. Of the total population of almost three million, there are 12,460 in the Free State who speak Irish alone, a proportion of 0.42 per cent. Those who speak both English and Irish amount to 17.9 per cent. The Irish-speaking people are among the poorest and most neglected in the Free State, portions of the Gaeltacht having been described by an Irish patriot as nothing but "rural slums." The flower of the people have emigrated; only the aged and children remain. And even in the Gaeltacht the majority of the inhabitants prefer to speak English for commercial and economic reasons, and are more anxious to extend the use of the alien tongue than to preserve and perpetuate the "national language." It has been said by an exponent of Irish that "the Gaelicising work of the Government is a march against time, for the regions in which Irish is still a living speech are a beleaguered fortress. It is no use resurrecting Irish in the schools if it ceases to be a living speech in its last vernacular stronghold."

For some time Irish patriots have striven to revive the ancient speech of their country. The Gaelic League was founded in 1893, and Dr. Douglas Hyde proclaimed: "The Gaelic language is the very soul of our race and of our nation; but lost it, and as a nation we are damned for ever." In the nineties a new generation of writers set to the task of creating a national literature, and the Irish dramatic movement began its splendid career. The Gaelic enthusiasts became associated with Irish revolutionary struggles, and the founders of the Free State were determined to re-establish Gaelic. Ireland became bilingual, for English was perforce recognised as an official language. Gaelic was taught in the schools and became a compulsory subject for certain positions in the Civil Service. In the Parliament formal procedure was invested with the archaic pomp of the ancient language. And the enthusiasts pointed out that "Ireland is unique in that it is the only self-governing State in Europe that retains a language and a linguistic outlook that once embodied the thoughts and feelings of the greater part of Western Europe."

For Gaelic is an ancient language, over two thousand years old, and, compared to it, English is only a tongue of yesterday. Its literature goes back to pre-Roman days, and it is estimated that the cycles of heroic tales, such as the Tain cycle, with its stirring story of "The Cattle-Steal of Cooley," describe a civilisation existing in the first centuries of Christianity. But Gaelic, in spite of its capacities as a language and the glories of its ancient literature, is not spoken as a vernacular by even one-half per cent. of the Irish Free State. It prevailed over the invasion of Norse and Norman-French, and it held its own until the nineteenth century, when, as the Irish began to win back their land and their freedom, they lost their language. Even a hundred years ago Irish was still the speech of the majority of the Irish people. But it was socially and economically inferior to English, the language of the Government, the professions, and the business careers. And to-day, when Mr. De Valera is clamouring for everything purely Irish, not 10 per cent. of the Deputies in the Dail and Senate can speak Irish. The conquest of Gaelic by English is essentially an economic one. The pride of nationality is not as strong as more material considerations. For Ireland to lose its ancient language may not be taken as a progressive spirit. And the same force of economic utility may be seen in such places as South Africa and the Philippines, where English is driving out Afrikaans and Spanish along with the native Filipino languages of Tagalog, Ilocano, and Visayan. These renaissances may embolden the Irish to continue the struggle for Gaelic against English, but victory for Irish can only be achieved by a complete subordination of economic factors to a burning sense of nationality.

WOODHEAD RESIGNS

EVERYWHERE and HERE, THERE

ARMAMENTS BEST SELLER

"Merchants of Death," which has appeared in an English edition, has had an interesting history in the United States.

Published some months ago, it was one of the many books on armaments which are flooding the American market.

But, partly because it is well documented, and partly because it is attractively presented, it has had a wider appeal than its fellows, and it has already sold more than 80,000 copies.

BREAK WITH THE PAST

The recent simultaneous publication of a balance sheet by the firm of J. P. Morgan and Co., of New York, and the registration of their London subsidiary, Morgan, Grenfell and Co., as a limited liability company, are events calculated to make the original J.P., "the lion of Wall Street," turn in his grave. Since its earliest days the Morgan firm has maintained two principles in its business dealings. One is that of absolute secrecy as to the name of its clients and the nature of its transactions. The other is that the personal fortunes of the partners, who have always been rich men, were at the disposal of the firm in times of crisis.

A POWERFUL BOARD

The new company has seven directors, who, between them, have connections with many of the world's wealthiest companies.

Mr. E. C. Grenfell and Mr. C. F. Whigham are on the Bank of England board. Mr. J. P. Morgan is a director of United States Steel and the International Mercantile Marine. Sir Thomas Catto controls a vast jute business in India and also has banking, insurance and telephone interests.

Three members of one family are among the directors—Mr. Vivian Hugh Smith; his eldest son Mr. Randal Hugh Vivian Smith, who is the youngest of the band; and his son-in-law Mr. Francis Rodd, who is the only member of the board to hold no outside directorships.

The Family Tree
"I understand you have been having your family tree looked up," said Jones.

"Yes," replied Brown, "and it cost me $5000."
"Quite expensive, wasn't it?"
"Yes, but it cost only $2000 to have it looked up. The other $3000 was what I paid to have it hushed up."

Young Webster

"What is the meaning of the word happy?" inquired the teacher.

"To be happy," announced Barbara, "is to feel as if you wanted to give all your things to your little sister."

HIGHEST MISSION OF NAZI WOMEN

MOTHERHOOD PRIMARY AIM TO-DAY

SOCIAL SERVICE PROGRAMME

(By Paula Siber.)

Charges that the National Socialist regime in Germany disfranchises women, relegating them to a position of inferiority, are vigorously denied here by Paula Siber, secretary for women's work in the German Ministry of the Interior. Frau Siber describes the programme of social service mapped for women, emphasising, as well, the primary aim to increase the nation's birth rate.

THE highest vocation of the German National-Socialist woman is not merely to bear children, but to rear them for her nation. The mother, as first teacher, does the most important pedagogic work for the national commonwealth. Realization of this should give guiding purpose and meaning to every phase of the preparation for a mentally-ripe, physically and spiritually strong generation of women.

The mother is the mediator between her child and its race. She is the curator of her people's culture which she passes on to her child in saga, folk-tales, games and customs that determine his later relations to his race. To do this, the woman must be conscious of her own strong inner bond with her nation. She must be trained in its history, its tradition.

In folk-culture, many unmarried women work with the mother, as teachers in girls' schools, in kindergartens, orphanages, in all the tasks of National Socialist welfare work. This last does not seek merely to bring aid in temporary need, but rather to penetrate to underlying causes of the need, where true help has pedagogic value. All this demands a new sort of training for the growing girl, a preparation for the National Socialist folk-sanitation service.

The coming years of resurrection for a generation, crushed in mind and body, demand strong educators, leaders, men and women, trained for a truly National-Socialist folk-health service. Here is the finest task for the unmarried woman. National Socialism needs these women just as it needs every man, every mother. To them it brings the child, the adolescent youth, the sick, those whom life has broken, the lost or erring souls, all who need mothering, need mother-love.

Education For Women

All these are sacred responsibility, meaning for the woman a complete absorption in the rights and duties of a national commonwealth where sex does determine the value of a personality, but rather the inner worth of the human being. It means the end of century-long segregation which pushed the woman back upon herself and her own little world, so that numberless women never realized they had responsibilities outside of themselves and their own little family circle, duties and obligations to the nation.

Education for the woman of to-day must take her new tasks into consideration, but must in no wise be a mere thoughtless spicing of masculine "career-training." Education for the girl should mean highest development of personality, where the awakening of heart and soul can go hand in hand with scientific instruction. The development of her intellect is not in any way to be stunted, for that, too, is needed in the full, conscious and sane development of personality.

Care and focus of the National Socialist education for girls is the "Women's Service Year," which comes at the close of the school period and serves also as basis for further career-training. National Socialism gives this Women's Service Year the greatest care and attention, because of its importance in the basic training of the future wife and mother as well as of the motherly worker in the service of the national commonwealth.

Social Service Schools

As there has been as yet no definitely established duty of labour service as foundation for a later professional training, as voluntary labour service for girls has taken its place for the moment. This volunteer service is a most excellent method of keeping young girls off the streets and utilizing any women's idleness in welfare work. The work-service also trains the girl for her position as mother and housewife. Career-training outside the home is taken care of in primary and upper grade schools, in the projected women's high school, in schools for social service, for sports of every kind, industrial schools and the like.

Great care and import are given to the training of the woman for social work, the value of which is being more and more understood. Along the line of social work and economics there is an immense field for true womanly careers, where there will never be any conflict of competition with men. The young girl finds all the higher schools of science open to her, for National Socialism proposes to equip woman as the comrade, the mother or the teacher with all possible mental development. And it also acknowledges woman's rights to the profession of medicine, of pedagogy, or any of the special sciences. But the woman who would adopt any such career must prove her qualifications. As teacher, she has the care and guidance of all female youth. As physician, her right and her tasks are always open to her. Who better than woman herself can bring aid and healing to the sick woman, the ailing child. That, in this summary, we do not mention many other scientific lines of work, does not mean that women are in any way to be excluded from such professions.

Disfranchisement Denied

The alleged disfranchisement of woman under National Socialism is nothing more than a last great lie of a defunct social order, a last effort to win adherents for itself.

The Woman's Movement claims for itself the title of the most progressive regeneration of true womanhood. It has advanced beyond the years of experimenting with antiquated women's organizations, and has found in its emphasis of true womanliness and its consequent demand for the highest development of woman's real self, the one possible way to a satisfying solution of the woman question.

National Socialism does not desire retrogression, restriction, for woman's life, but rather its highest and best unfolding. Its goal is the organisation of all women into the service of the national commonwealth.

BANGLES STOLEN.

Accused Claims Ownership.

Pleading not guilty to the charge of the theft of a pair of gold bangles, valued at $80 the property of Chan Ng, a married woman, of No. 209 Hollywood Road, third floor, Li Hoi, a woman, was remanded 24 hours by Mr. Q. A. A. Macfadyen at the Central Magistracy this morning. Sergeant Hemsley stated that accused went to make a visit to complainant's house, and when complainant was not of the room, she took the bangles from a drawer. Accused said that the bangles were hers.

DOOR-MAT THIEF GAOLED.

Girls' School Victimised.

Sentence of three months' hard labour was imposed on Cheung Chang, unemployed, by Mr. Q. A. A. Macfadyen at the Central Magistracy this morning, for the theft of two door-mats from the St. Paul's Girls' School and a door-mat from No. 3, Kennedy Road, the property of Mr. White.

Pat Ping-chun, shop master of No. 39 Wellington Street, was fined $50, for receiving two stolen door-mats from Cheung. Sergeant Shepherd stated that the two mats from the St. Paul's Girls' School were valued at $18, and that accused sold them to Pat Ping-chun for $1.50.

DILLINGER SHOT DEAD

SECOND GAOL BREAK
In attempting to prevent their flight Sheriff Sarber was killed. Three months later, while leading his gang of gaol-breakers, Dillinger was arrested and charged with the sheriff's murder, as well as with being connected with 100 other murders and bandit outrages.

Dillinger was lodged in the escape-proof gaol at Crownpoint—a prison run on "model" lines by a woman warden, Mrs. Lillian Holley, to await his trial on March 12. Offers of strengthened forces to guard the desperado were rejected by the warden with the remark, "We can take care of the gaol ourselves."

When, a week before he should have been brought to trial, Dillinger escaped, Mrs. Holley had hysterics.

The gangster got out of the gaol by a bare-faced piece of bluff. With a "pistol" fashioned out of wood, he held up his warden and, with a Negro colleague, seized a machine-gun from Mrs. Holley's office, drove the warden into cells, and walked out into the prison yard, where he appropriated Mrs. Holley's car and drove off.

20,000 POLICE ON TRAIL
Twenty thousand policemen were put on the trail of the gangster, to begin the amazing series of raids and escapes which have culminated in his death. Within the past three months Dillinger is said to have staged spectacular raids at:

St. Cloud, Florida: When with two accomplices, armed with machine-guns, he walked into a bank and took $2,000.

Warsaw, Indiana: When he stole revolvers from a police station.

Sioux Falls, Dakota: Where he fought his way out of the town carrying with him four girl bank clerks as hostages.

St. Paul, Minnesota: Where he was shot at and wounded by police when nearly cornered, but fought his way to liberty.

Port Huron, Michigan: Where his presence was disclosed by the death in a gun fight of Herbert Younghusband, the Negro who escaped with him from Crownpoint gaol.

Pana, Illinois: Where he raided a bank, knocked a watchman unconscious, overpowered clerks as they arrived, and forced a cashier to open a safe from which he took $5,000.

Coincidentally with the raid at Pana, Governor White, of Ohio, received a message from Dillinger threatening that unless he immediately released two gangsters under sentence of electrocution, he would be shot.

The week before Dillinger showed his iron nerve by dyeing his hair red and attending a family reunion at Moresville, Indiana, to the intense gratification of his father. Dillinger was in another State by the time the police had picked up his trail.

It seemed that the climax had eventually been reached "on the night of Sunday, April 22 when Dillinger and his gang were surrounded in the Bohemia Hotel, a drinking resort in the small town of Mercer, Wisconsin."

The luck was still with the gangster, however, for the police gave their presence away when they opened fire on a car leaving the hotel in the false impression that the wanted man was inside.

The shots, which killed one of the occupants of the car and wounded the other two, ended all hope of surprising Dillinger and his desperate followers. The police attacked the hotel to be received by a devastating burst of machine-gun and revolver fire.

TEAR-GAS BOMBS
Twice the police and Federal agents attacked and twice they were repulsed. When eventually, with the aid of tear-gas bombs, the authorities forced the occupants of the hotel to surrender, their total capture was three women.

Dillinger got away, a policeman being killed in the process. A Federal agent had been killed during one of the attacks.

The gangster did not escape unscathed, for the police learned that he had received a wound in the shoulder which prevented the use of one arm. He was also wounded in the leg.

Dillinger, once a farm labourer and the son of a grocer, has spread terror throughout a dozen states since his escape from gaol last March, and in that time he has netted $20,000 from bank robberies alone.

$100,000 AMASSED
In the past year he is estimated to have amassed a total of $100,000 by his depredations, and to have cost the Federal Authorities $300,000.

An even more appalling estimate is that 15 people, including five policemen, have lost their lives during the man-hunt. Dillinger has been many times befriended by the public during his amazing series of escapades. At St. Paul's a doctor and a nurse were arrested for attending his wound.

TWO POLICEMEN SHOT

The murder of two policemen was last month attributed to John Dillinger and his gang.

The two policemen, Martin O'Brien and Lloyd Mulvihill, were assigned to the task of "getting Dillinger." In their swift little motor-car they had been trailing suspects and following up possible clues along the Indiana roads.

In a deserted section of East Chicago, Indiana, a workman on his way home came across a police car stopped in the middle of the road.

He looked inside. The two policemen were dead, each with a dozen bullets in his head and neck. The motor-car itself was riddled with bullet holes. The revolvers of both men lay beside them on the seat.

Their murderers caught them in a moment of surprise, probably speeding past the police car and raking it with machine-guns.

$5,000 REWARDS
The Governors of five States each offered $5,000 for the capture of the arch-criminal.

The murder of the two policemen was by a daring raid on the South Holland Trust and Savings Bank, situated in a village close to the Indiana border.

There were no witnesses of the day's crime, but the police believe that the five men and one woman participating in the raid were those who killed the policemen on sight.

People imagine that Dillinger must have been one of them, but if he was he was not recognised.

The courage of the bank employees frustrated an attempt to steal the cash. They killed one gunman, and seriously injured a second, who died later in hospital. His companion refused to forsake his wounded pal, and, despite the bullets flying around, helped him to safety.

The two reached the motor-car, which was occupied by two men and a woman.

Red Indian Aids Dramatic Escape.

News was received at Chicago recently of an amazing attempt made by one of Dillinger's henchmen to secure help from the underworld for his chief. The latter, with two or three gangsters, was then believed to be hiding in one of the deserted summer bungalows at Squaw Lake (Wisconsin).

This desperate bid at a moment when the police thought they had cornered Dillinger was made by George "Babyface" Nelson. Guided by "Old Catfish," a Red Indian, he slipped through the police cordon.

Nelson was with Dillinger when he escaped from the Little Bohemia road-house at Mercer.

Stealing a car he then tried to reach St. Paul. But the finding of this abandoned convinced the police that, fooled by the cordons round St. Paul, he had turned back and rejoined Dillinger and the rest of the gang.

SQUAW FORCED TO COOK
It appears, however, that he did not do so, for within 24 hours of the Little Bohemia raid he was back within 25 miles of Mercer.

These details have been mainly supplied to the police by Old Catfish, who said that Nelson, armed with three revolvers, broke into his hut near the Lac de Flambeau.

Nelson threatened the Indian family, consisting of a squaw, two boys and a month-old papoose, with a gun.

He forbade them to leave the hut and made the woman cook for him. The next morning he took Old Catfish with him, stole a car from a house a few miles away, and compelled the Indian to guide him by rough roads towards St. Paul. He threw Catfish out when they neared open country.

The police thought that Nelson, these Cantonesse units to attack at the end of the month.

Evelyn Frechette, half-Indian sweetheart of Dillinger desperate at his inability to re-establish contact with the gang after his abortive attempt to reach St. Paul, only left the Catfish hut when he discovered he was unable to secure help from the Redskin relatives of Evelyn Frechette, Dillinger's sweetheart, who is half Indian.

HOLLYWOOD GAOL KEYS
When the St. Paul police arrested Evelyn Frechette they made an extraordinary discovery.

In her vanity bag were duplicate keys of Hollywood police station. How she got them is a mystery. There is no record of her ever having been there.

Detectives, armed with portable machine-guns and tear-gas bombs, concentrated on Squaw Lake, where Dillinger was thought to be. Each scattered bungalow was surrounded before they searched it.

The police anticipated a desperate resistance, so refused all offers of help from numerous civilian volunteers who believed that the police were badly handicapped owing to their ignorance of the wild country.

BANKNOTES LEFT

An added incentive was given to the search by the disclosure that the Dillinger gang left three bags of banknotes in their hurried escape from Mercer. These were identified as among those which Mr. Edward Bremner's family paid as ransom for the kidnapped St. Paul banker last January.

One of America's song-hits—"I'm heading for the last round-up"—has been sung with special reference to Dillinger.

Dying Gangster Says Chief Dead.

A hint that Dillinger was dead and secretly buried was made by Tommy Carroll, chief lieutenant of the gunman-killer, in a deathbed statement, at Waterloo, Iowa, on June 7.

Seeking to clarify the reports, Secret Service Agent O. H. Hewey asked the dying Carroll what had happened to Dillinger.

"Where did you bury John," he asked.

"I hid him," Carroll gasped, and died.

Carroll was one of the several accomplices of Dillinger who have been killed, wounded or captured by officers of the law during the past year.

DOUBT DISPELLED
A trio, however, believed to be the outlaw, and two of his aides, on June 14 abducted three persons at Davenport, Iowa, and immediately disappeared in a stolen automobile, thus dispelling the belief that Dillinger was dead.

GOVERNOR THREATENED
Last month, steel-helmeted militia were sent to guard the house of Mr. Rugby Lafon, Governor of Kentucky, who received a letter signed "Dillinger Squad" threatening him with death unless he ordered the release of Neal-Bowman, a gangster then awaiting trial.

"GET DILLINGER OR DIE"
A squad of detectives, named "The Formidable Forty" was recently appointed to "get Dillinger or die in the attempt."

An expert sharpshooter named Frank Reynolds, a bachelor sergeant, was at their head.

Federal agents chasing the elusive bandit were equipped with new machine guns said to be "the most powerful ever used outside the Army."

BIG "RED" DRIVE EXPECTED

The Nanjing troops in Fukien are concentrated on the western borders in an effort to capture Changting, a frontier town which has been in the hands of the Reds for three years. It is of strategic importance and commands the gateway to Kiangsi.

Cantonese forces are located at Wuping, Shanghang, and Yang-tung towns in Fukien close to Kwangtung. It is stated that Red troops will remain here until General Chiang Kai-shek wishes after a meeting on garrison affairs these Cantonese units to attack at the end of the month.

To-day's Short Story.

OLD LOZA'S MANGO

By Richard Carol.

THE agent led the way across the garden, overgrown with weeds and bastard flowers, dead as long as the now-forgotten prince who had once dwelt in the miniature rococo palace which it surrounded. Behind him came Old Loza, waddling well despite her eighty years and the long, dust-dragged galabayahs she wore under her black milayah, dresses so numerous (for she never discarded an old one) that she herself had but a vague idea as to their count. Old Loza waddled, but it was a dignified waddle like that of a drum-major grown over-fat; but the procession she headed of half a dozen men in galabayah and tarboush or crocheted takaya straggled in her wake in a casual disorder.

By a forty-foot mango in the extreme corner of the garden the agent stopped, pulled out his notebook and stood a moment while Old Loza and the half dozen gathered round.

"What am I bid?" he asked without further preamble.

"Four gineh," rapped Old Loza without hesitation.

"Wa rub," came from one of the men, and the moving pencil suddenly stopped in the air.

The agent looked hard at the man who had put in the bid. Ah, that explained it! He was a stranger to the annual auction of the fruit of the mango trees and didn't know that this tree was Old Loza's tree, had been hers for twenty years. She always bid a fair four gineh, and it was understood that no one bid against her. He turned his gaze to Old Loza, who was staring at the man in angry surprise.

Suddenly the agent realised his position. After all, it was an auction.

"Four and a quarter I am offering," he announced, and looked inquiringly at Old Loza.

"Wa nuss," snapped the old woman, her eyes never leaving the stranger.

"Khamsa illa rub," the man put in without hesitation.

"Four and three-quarters," repeated the agent. "Five less a quarter. Any—"

"Khamsa," came through the clenched teeth of Old Loza.

"Wa rub." There was something almost frightening about the calm, inhuman way the two words followed on, pounced on her like a cat on a mouse. But Old Loza had recovered from her first surprise. If it was to be a fight, well, she had fought before.

She stepped back, ran a critical eye over the green-yellow spikes of flowers that smothered the tree like tiny bouquets of mignonette. It gave all the promise of a good crop, and she could always reckon on a piastre or two more for four or five mangos than the others. She was an institution; she knew it and traded on it.

"Wa nuss," she snapped with a nod of finality.

"Sitta illa rub," came the relentless voice.

Then Old Loza panicked. It was beyond her understanding. No one ever bid more than five gineh for the trees. There was something strange about it all. But she would have her mango, have it even if she lost over it. The loose skin tightened over her jaw.

TO-MORROW'S STORY

To-morrow's story will be "The Jack Rabbit Drive," by Robert McAlmon.

"Sitta gineh," she hissed.

"Wa rub."

"Wa nuss."

"Saba illa rub."

It was mad. The eyes of the agent and the five others gazed at the two bidders in hopeless bewilderment.

"Saba gineh," cried Old Loza, and it was a cry of despair.

"Wa rub," pounced the other with a deadly precision—and Old Loza turned away.

"Seven and a quarter," repeated the agent, looked round, paused a moment, then entered it in his book.

"There are the other trees," he suggested, almost in apology, but she seemed not to hear him. He moved off and the men followed him; left Old Loza with the mango tree that had been hers for 20 summers, but was hers no longer.

She stumbled up to it, leaned against it and her worn hands crept round its rough trunk, stroked it, caressed it. For a while she stood thus in a strange, understanding silence. Then suddenly her old, bloodless lips opened round, and from her throat past the rattling tongue came a weird, high-pitched shrilling. And the men across the garden shivered a little in the hot sun.

The auction was over and the agent had departed, his work on that property over for the year—for the palace was haunted, and no one ever came to look over it. But Old Loza still remained—with her mango. Then, at last, she left it, dragged her slow way through the garden, past the long verandah almost hidden by the bougainvillea with its pale yellow flowerets peeping out from the scarlet-purple masses like early stars from a sunset sky. She saw nothing of it, dragged on, unthinking, unseeing, till she stood again below the mango-tree, her mango-tree—but outside the iron railing that enclosed the garden.

Here it was at the three-way corner she had sat each summer for twenty summers with the green-yellow mangos in baskets beside her, fresh-culled each morning from the net-enclosed tree, once by her grandson, Mohammed, then by Ahmed, her great-grandson of twenty years. Here in July and August she had held her court, received the English sitters who came from the huge block of flats which shaded her from the southern sun and paid just a piastre or two more to get Old Loza's mangos.

She was still living again these glories of the past when Ahmed, that great-grandson of twenty years, arrived with his donkey cart to fetch her home. She told him nothing, just allowed him to help her up on to the bare boards, where she sat cross-legged, hugging her black milayah round her, swaying to a rhythm of despair.

Over Zamalek Bridge and along the bank of the Nile till they came to the village of Zarkha, a few dozen huts clustered round a paint-blistered cafe. Then Ahmed helped her down, and she disappeared into the hut where she lived with her grandson, Mohammed, his wife, and Ahmed, that great-grandson of hers.

MONSTER SILVER PURCHASE

1,300,000,000 Ounces For U.S. Treasury.

ROOSEVELT'S SCHEME

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1924. Received July 23, 9.34 a.m.)

The United States Postmaster-General, Mr. James A. Farley, speaking at Reno, this afternoon will say that President Roosevelt is purchasing 1,300,000,000 ounces of silver with a view to increasing currency as well as to stabilise the price.

President Roosevelt he will say, does not intend to bid the price to U.S.$1.29 per ounce immediately, but will remove the surplus from the markets gradually to raise the price to U.S.$1.29.

"When this is accomplished, silver will be stabilised at that price and other nations will be ready to join the United States in reopening mints for silver coinage."

"The Administrations' gold action was the greatest monetary step of the age," he will add.

OVERFLOW AT TYTAM

Kowloon suffered from minor floods yesterday evening, following several very heavy showers between 8 p.m. and 9 p.m. In Nathan Road, near Boundary Road the depth of the water was, in places as much as a foot, while in some instances it gained entry to the ground floors of buildings.

RAPID FLUCTUATION

The height of the water fluctuated very rapidly, dropping away to almost nothing 15 minutes after the downpour had subsided. The floods are apparently caused

SHING MUN DAM WATCHMAN

Description Given To Police.

KNOCKED UNCONSCIOUS BY CLUNT INSTRUMENT

Wong Chung, the 54-year-old watchman of Shing Mun dynamite magazine, who was attacked by four men in the early hours of Sunday morning, has reported to the police that at about 4.30 a.m. he was on duty when four men approached him, two of the men asked him for a match, and when he replied that he had none, they attacked him, and took his brown leather purse, containing $10.00 in money, a gold ring, valued at $10, and a silver watch, valued at $4.

One man grabbed his coat and pulled him to the ground, while the other knocked him unconscious by hitting him on the head with a blunt instrument.

When he recovered consciousness he found himself bound to a camp chair, ten yards from the place where he had been attacked. His feet and hands were bound with wire.

On being examined it was found that there was a small bruise on the right side of Wong's head.

Wong describes his assailants as being of medium height and build, and between the ages of 23 and 30 years, both having the appearance of workmen. The other two stood too far away for him to describe them.

by heavy washways of dirt and rubble from the hillsides, and from blocks of land on which building is in progress. The dirt prevents a free passage for the water through the gullies and drains, which, while there is a heavy rush of water, are unable to cope with the flow.

RIOT ENDS BAND CONTEST

Instrumental Weapons Used By Contestants

Lisbon. Villages in the district of Louzada, Oporto, held a band contest. Now several of the musicians are in hospital—and others are in prison. Two "crack" hands were left in the final. They played—but the judges could not decide which had won. Then one of the bandmen walked up to the rival band and, putting his foot through the big drum, said: "Now see what your disgusting music sounds like." That started a free fight, the bandmen using their instruments as weapons. Supporters of either side joined in with sticks and stones. Finally, one side drove the other from the field and, playing their battered instruments as well as they could, marched away in triumph—Reuter.

MAN-EATING SHARKS FOR MOSCOW

Monster Aquarium Planned

Moscow. Moscow is to build one of the world's largest aquariums shortly. It will contain more than 10,000 different fish and water animals. Four big tanks will be used, three of them being filled with salt water from the Black Sea, the Caspian Sea and the Atlantic ocean, and the fourth with fresh water. A large collection of man-eating sharks and crocodiles will be the main feature of the new aquarium. A special department will hatch fish to be used for feeding the other fishes—Reuter.

After an adventurous trans-Atlantic voyage in a 27-foot sail boat on which they several times despatched their lives, Andrew Behnemer (left) and George Swiechowski, Polish army officers, are now safe in New York. They left Gdynia, Poland, a year ago. Their craft is shown.

The rest of the day she spent squatting in her corner, looking out with dull, dazed, unblinking eyes. She would eat no food. To the questions of Mohammed and his wife she paid no heed, almost as if she had been deaf. And in the end they left her.

Nor did she sleep that night. But, in the deep silence of the dark, the numbness began to leave her brain. Slowly, at first, that shrewd old mind began to work again: the eyes blinked into life as if Old Loza had just wakened from a deep sleep. Then calmly, methodically, and without passion she thought back to the auction. The man who had beaten her had bid more than the fruit would fetch. Perhaps he was just a fool. But no; she had not seen him even look at the tree. He just over-bid her each time, automatically, without hesitation. He was going to get that mango tree even if he lost over it. Why?

It meant jealousy or spite or revenge. But again, why? Why? He was a stranger. He could have no reason to hate her so much. Then her quickening mind leaped to it—it was not the stranger but someone behind the stranger, some coward afraid to come out into the sun. Old Loza smiled grimly in the darkness. She did not know and guessing was a foolish game; but she would find out this skulking man or woman.

At the pale of dawn she unrolled her mattress, lay down on it in her corner and straightway fell into a light, dreamless sleep.

In the full morning she told her folk simply that she had been outbid for the mango tree. Her grandson and great-grandson looked at her in surprise, thinking of the times they had been required to take her each winter to see how the tree was going, marvelling at her strange calmness. But they said nothing. Then Old Loza turned to her great-grandson.

"Ahmed, get me the name of the man who outbid me."

His round brown eyes expressed his bewilderment. Old Loza jerked her head in impatience.

"Go to the agent. Tell him I send you. He will think I want to try and buy back the mango tree from him. Tell him that if you like, but—her jaws snapped shut, "get me the name."

Later that day, Ahmed brought it to her. It was Abdel Rasek and he came from Tark, a small village the size of their own and but a mile away. Abdel Rasek? Old Loza pondered the name awhile.

"To-morrow," Ahmed, she instructed her great-grandson, "You go to Tark to find out why Abdel Rasek wanted my mango-tree."

"Find out," began the youth, staring at her. "But—how can one do that?"

Old Loza threw up her arms. "Has Allah given you a skull empty as the rotten walnut?" she cried. "Go into the cafe. Talk to make others talk, then listen. Ahmed, listen."

So he went to Tark, to the cafe, and found his task easier than he expected. For Ahmed was young for his 20 years and shy and a whole hour he sat there half-afraid, trying to make up his mind to talk to someone, talk of mango-trees and of one mango in particular. Then a man came in. Ahmed did not know him, but he seemed to know Ahmed and he smiled at him, though it was not the kind of smile that Ahmed liked. Then he sat down at the table opposite to Ahmed.

"You are from Zarkha," he said and Ahmed nodded in surprise. "Of the family of Loza, the seller of mangoes," sneered the other.

"Why, yes. She is my great-grandmother."

"You have a fool of a great-grandmother, then," the other went on. "A fool," he repeated; then turned aside and spat contemptuously.

The youth started up across the table, his fists clenching and his eyes flashing; but the other pushed him firmly back in his chair and Ahmed, remembering his instructions, made no further move.

"Yes, she sits at the corner of the old palace garden every summer selling her mangoes as if she were the queen herself. 'Saida, sit,' she says to all the English ladies, 'and thinks she is the great lady herself.' Suddenly his lips were drawn together and a cruel gleam was in his eye. "But this summer she will have to squat in the corner of her hut and dream. It all. For the mango-tree is mine. Now, you poor spawn of Loza, go tell her that Sadek Meguid has not forgotten."

NORTH ATLANTIC
TRAVELNo Sign Of Higher Demand.

COMPETITION INCREASES

In view of the Cunard-White Star merger, more than usual interest attaches to the results of the present North Atlantic passenger season.

Unfortunately, there is so far little promise of 1934 recording any material increase in the volume of Atlantic travel, owing to the unsettled economic conditions in both Europe and America.

There is no sign at present of any abnormal demand for eastbound accommodation, and as the westbound business is mainly return traffic the prospects are by no means encouraging. It is quite certain, though, that there will be intensive competition for the traffic offering.

There will be little alteration in the contending fleets, but that of the United States will be strengthened by the inclusion of the "Leviathan," of 48,943 tons.

This vessel, which was built in 1914 and is a knot slower than the "Majestic," has proved very popular with American travellers, but as the president of the International Mercantile Marine Company found she was operating at a loss of $16,000 per voyage, it was decided last year to withdraw her and concentrate upon the building of a sister-vessel to the successful cabin ships "Manhattan" and "Washington."

"Leviathan" Luxury.

The U.S. Shipping Board, however, did not approve this decision, and the reconditioned
"Leviathan" is therefore returning to service, and Mr.
Franklin has appealed to Americans to sail by her in preference to other express liners. The attitude of the Shipping Board is perhaps understandable, for having entered the luxury service, they do not, for reasons which may be largely sentimental, care to abandon the field to the ships of other nations.

The British fleet has been thoroughly overhauled to make the best showing possible, and in this connection it is interesting to note that the "Aquitania" made her last homeward run at an average speed of 23.75 knots, equal, we believe, to any of her previous performances.

Another factor which should assist the economical working of Cunard White Star, Limited, is the fact that on June 30 the I.M.M. Company cease to be agents for the White Star Line.
This should consolidate and materially cheapen the United States scheme of agency and office representation, and as a similar policy is being adopted in Europe the merger should reap substantial benefit from the rationalisa-tion.

Page 10)

And because Ahmed was one in a village which hated his own and he must return without delay with his news, he got up without a word and hurried back.

"What!" screamed Old Loza, when he had told her faithfully what Sadek Meguid had said. "You let him spew such words and your knife remained dry. Is . . ."

As suddenly as it had risen her voice calmed and a strange glint came into her eyes. "No, Ahmed, you did well. To-night, when your father returns, we will talk it over together."

That evening she told them of the seed that had sprouted in the fertile hate of Sadek's heart. Twenty years before it had been arranged that Sadek should have Samiha, her grand-daughter, for fifty gineh. It was a fair price, but Loza had her pride and her position in the village to think of, and had wanted it shown in the contract as a hundred gineh.
Sadek refused and Loza knew then that he would be a bad husband.

For it clearly made no difference unless he had it in mind to get rid of Samiha by triple divorce, when he would have to pay Samiha the other fifty gineh. So Sadek had to go elsewhere for a bride and found a little trouble, she had heard. And for twenty years he had turned and twisted it in his hating mind.

"But what can one do?" inquired
Mohammed, puzzled.

A crafty smile crept over the face of Old Loza.

"I have been thinking," she said with a cold snap in her voice. "He has insulted us—and you or Ahmed might kill him. But then you would have to go to prison, for it would surely be discovered. I do not want my family to go to prison. But, if there is a man dead among other dead, it is not so easy to discover whose hand held the knife."

She looked at the blank faces before her and chuckled.

"There are many others in Zark-ha who have debts to pay in Targ.
The men of Zarkha might go over to Targ one day and settle them.
Then there would be other dead than Sadek."

"That would make it difficult for the police, but still Zarkha would get into trouble for starting the fight.
But," she added, with a ring of triumph, "if Targ attacked Zarkha,
we would be defending ourselves.
Targ would have the dead and Targ would get the blame."

Then the voice of Old Loza was calm and cold and incisive as she gave her orders.

"You, O Mohammed, you must tell the village that to-morrow after the sun goes down the men of Targ may come with hate in their hearts.
That will be enough to bring out the sticks and knives and get the stones ready. Young Ahmed, you can run.
Go you at sunset to Targ, to the cafe. Seek out this Sadek, call him son of a dog, white-livered attacker of old women, call him . . . call him
the vilest things you can think, spit them at him so that he is red mad with anger, shout that all Targ is like him. All Targ, Ahmed. Then, when they are all got mad as Sadek, so mad that they do not stop to think, run back here, O Ahmed, run as fast as the hare of the desert.

Simple and shy was Ahmed, but not lacking in courage; and he had not forgotten the foulness Sadek had hurled at him the previous day.
So, soon after sunset, he made his way to the hated village, spat out his insults and took to his heels.

A fearful, terrifying mile for Ahmed, with his heart near breaking from his hurrying chest. But at last, breathless, he staggered into the village, lured in the maddened, straggling mob from Targ—and suddenly all Zarkha was alive. Those who were of Loza, those who had their own feuds with Targ, the rest who knew only that there was a fight and they must not miss it.
Stones flew through the air, sticks cracked against skulls and sticks, knives slashed and plunged in silently by the smoky flickering light of the cafe lamps.

Then what was left of the Targ mob broke and straggled back home.
But some remained in Zarkha who would never return. And when the cafe lamps had been snuffed the cold stare of the crescent moon picked out the still body of Sadek Meguid
as it lay stabbed thrice to the heart.

There was a police inquiry, of course, but in the end no great harm came to the family of Old Loza. These village fights were common.

It was the eve of the fantasia of Shem el Nessim. The agent led the way across the garden, overgrown with weeds and bastard flowers, that had once belonged to a prince. Behind him waddled an old woman, but with something of the dignity of a drum major, heading a straggling half-dozen slouching men in white and striped galabeyahs. Under a forty-foot mango tree in the extreme corner of the garden the agent stopped and waited while Old Loza and the others gathered round.

"What am I bid?" he asked.

"Four gineh," rapped Old Loza and looked round the others with a grim defiance in her eyes.

The agent followed her gaze, paused a moment. There was alliance.

"Four gineh it is," he said and wrote it in his book.

BRIDES BOYCOTTED
IN HOLY LAND"Prices Too High" Say
Bachelors

Jerusalem.

Young Moslems of Ramleh, near Jaffa, have announced that they will boycott local brides.

It is the custom there for men to "buy" their future wives, and they say that the fathers demand too high a price.

So bachelors declare that unless the price goes down they will "import" wives from Cyprus. Several men have already done so.—Reu-

New York, To-day. The forthcoming visit of the Governor of the Bank of England, Mr. Montague Norman, who is travelling with the Governor of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, Mr. George Harrison, is causing rumours that some kind of stabilisation is impending.

The rumours, however, cannot be confirmed.—United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

1934 DROUGHT AGGRAVATES LOW PRODUCTION

Crops Prices Advance In June.

CURRENT PRICE SITUATION IN U. S. REVIEWED

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL.
(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894, Received July 23, 9.34 a.m.)

Ithaca, To-day. Professors Warren and Pearson, of Cornell University, in reviewing the current price situation in the June issue of the "Farm Economist," say that gold is now at the highest exchange value for basic commodities in the United States history.

They explain that the low prices, accentuated by the low demand for food and clothing, due to unemployment, give the impression of over-production. In reality, however, the 1934 drought has aggravated the low production of the past few years.

They call attention to the fact that nearly all crops advanced in price in June.

"In the past year the prices of farm products rose by 50 per cent., preventing the collapse of the price of farm land and actually starting a slight rise in this class of real estate," they declare.—United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

$2,000,000,000 In Commission And Interest From U.S. Investors

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL.
(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894, Received July 23, 9.34 a.m.)

Washington, To-day. The United States Senate Stock Exchange Committee's first report shows that members of 29 securities exchanges collected nearly U.S.$2,000,000,000 in commission and interest from American investors from 1928 to 1933.

The report criticises the stock exchanges for permitting unrestricted short selling, wash sales, pool operations, and other manipulative practices.

It stated that Federal regulation was imposed only after the exchanges displayed a lack of desire or inability to keep their skirts clean.

It urged intelligent helpful co-operation of the exchanges toward wise and proper administration of the National Securities Exchange Act "which should release investors from the apprehension which has paralysed their confidence in securities during the last five years."—United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.
